Filming in White Rock

The City of White Rock is a strong supporter of the film industry and encourages sustainable production. The City of White Rock Film Office is the first point of contact for all your questions regarding filming. To contact our Film Office, please call 604-541-2252 or email the City's Filming Coordinator at cwestwood@whiterockcity.ca.

There are two ways that your business can become a filming location:

1. A location scout (the person who finds spots that fit a script) approaches you about filming because your business has a look that fits.
2. You can proactively register your property on the Creative BC website so that when location scouts are searching the database, they can see you:
creativebc.com/community/register-your-property.

Compensation is determined by the film company and is usually scaled to the scope and duration of filming use.

The City has a Filming Policy, and all film companies must abide by the City's bylaws, policies, and procedures. The Filming Coordinator works closely with the production before granting approval to film in a neighbourhood. When a production is approved, an information letter will be sent to the area businesses and residents outlining important details such as:

- The date(s) and time(s) and location(s) of filming
- Parking requests
- Special effects, and
- Any extraordinary impacts such as traffic control or lighting

If you have questions or concerns before or during filming, you can contact the Location Manager or the City's Filming Coordinator. Contact information for both individuals will be on the information letter.

The City Filming Policy along with related bylaws and Creative BC Code of Conduct are all on the City website at whiterockcity.ca/filming. The film policy and procedures have been developed and refined with the goal to create sustainable filming.

Business Permits and Licenses

Phone: 604-541-2139

Email: licences@whiterockcity.ca

Use the MyWhiteRock online portal to apply for a business licence, pay annual renewals, make updates and changes, and print your business licence. Business licenses can be obtained for Personal Services, Professional Services, Retail Services and Contracting Services.

Check the City of White Rock's Zoning Bylaw to make sure that your type of business is allowable in the location you have selected for it. Review whiterockcity.ca/building to determine if a building permit will be required.

For some types of business supporting documentation may be required. For example, if your business is located within the City of White Rock a floor plan/layout of your business will be required. For licenced contractors, such as plumbers, a copy of your Trade Qualification ticket will be required.

Development Applications

Phone: 604-541-2277

Email: planning@whiterockcity.ca

Prior to submitting any development application(s), please review the City of White Rock's Planning Procedures Bylaw to determine if a formal pre-application submission and payment of fees will be required. We recommend you contact the Planning & Development Services Department at 604-541-2277 or planning@whiterockcity.ca to arrange a pre-application meeting to discuss your proposal, identify what applications may be required, and get answers to any questions you may have before proceeding with any applicable development application(s).

Your application will be processed in accordance with the requirements of various City bylaws and Council policies. Read all relevant portions of the White Rock Planning Procedures Bylaw, 2017, No. 2220 for a full understanding of the City's procedural and submission requirements.

Learn more from the frequently requested Planning documents available on our Resources and Documents page at whiterockcity.ca/planning. This page also includes application forms for the various planning approvals. Note that each form outlines the submission requirements associated with the application.

For additional information on different types of development applications, please view the following sections below:

Board of Variance Application

Boards of Variance can grant minor variances to Zoning Bylaw and other rulings. The variance must be justified by the presence of “undue hardship”, as determined by the Board.

Learn more from The City's Guide to the Board of Variance at whiterockcity.ca/development

Development Permits

A Development Permit must be obtained prior to the subdivision of land, or the construction/addition/alteration of any building or structure on any property in any designated Development Permit Area.

You can determine whether your property falls within a Development Permit Area by reviewing Schedule B - Form, Character and Sustainability Development Permit Areas or Schedule C: Environmental Development Permit Areas of the White Rock Official Community Plan

A Minor Development Permit is a development permit which, if issued, would conform to the development permit guidelines set out in the Official Community Plan, but which does not require a variance to a provision of a City bylaw.

A Major Development Permit refers to any Development Permit that does not qualify as a Minor Development Permit (see definitions in the City's Planning Procedures Bylaw for more information).

Learn more from The City's Guide to the Development Permit Process at whiterockcity.ca/development

Development Variance Permit

A Development Variance Permit (DVP) is issued by Council and is used to vary the provisions of a land use by-law, for example the siting, shape, and physical dimensions of buildings and structures. DVPs may also be used to vary provisions not possible through the Board of Variance, such as modifying off-street parking requirements.

Learn more from The City's Guide to the Development Variance Permit Process at whiterockcity.ca/development

Official Community Plan Amendment

The White Rock Official Community Plan is a statement of objectives and policies that guides decisions on planning and land use management in the City. If the use, density, or building typology of a development proposal is not consistent with the OCP, you will have to apply for an OCP Amendment for that property. An OCP Amendment may be required in conjunction with a Zoning Amendment.

Note that all Official Community Plan Amendment applications are subject to “early review” by the City's Land Use and Planning Committee. This early review allows for development ideas to be presented to the Committee (Council) with limited up-front investment as an initial application only requires conceptual plans and, in some instances, limited technical study (e.g., Arborist Report, Parking Study, etc.).

Zoning Amendment

Each property within the City of White Rock is assigned under a zone in accordance with White Rock Zoning Bylaw. This zoning bylaw establishes regulations for the use of land, buildings, and structures in the City of White Rock. It also regulates the location, height, siting, and intensity of development. Other regulations, such as parking requirements and siting exceptions, are addressed in this document. If the use you are proposing for your development is not permitted under the current zoning bylaw you will have to apply for a Zoning Amendment for that property.

Business Services

Note that all Zoning Amendment applications are subject to “early review” by the City’s Land Use and Planning Committee. This early review allows for development ideas to be presented to the Committee (Council) with limited up-front investment as an initial application only requires conceptual plans and, in some instances, limited technical study (e.g., Arborist Report, Parking Study, etc.).

Learn more from The City’s Guide to the Zoning Amendment Process at whiterockcity.ca/zoning.

Other Types of Applications

Please note that the City processes other types of development applications such as Liquor License Referral Applications and Temporary Use Permits. For further information regarding submission and procedural requirements for these types of applications, please contact the City’s Planning and Development Services Department at 604-541-2277 or planning@whiterockcity.ca.
